[From the St. Louis Gazette.] Avery Sentimental Essay. Upon a very sentimental topic, by very sentimental sentimentalists. "My heart is broken-not estranged."

·How many bright eyes grow dim.' says a beautiful writer, how many soft cheeks grow pule-how many lovely forms fade away into the tomb, and none can tell the cause that blighted their leveliness! As the dore will clasp its wings to its sides, and cover and conceal the arrow that is preying on its vitals -- so it is the nature of woman to hide from the world the pangs of wounded affection. The love of a delicate female is always shy and silent. Even when fortunate, she scarcely breathes it to herself; but when otherwise, she turies it in the recesses of her bosom, and there less it cower and brood among the rifus of her peace. With her the desire of the heart has failed. The great charm of existence is at an end. She neglects all the cheerful exercises which gladden the spirits, quicken the pulse, and send the tide of life in healthful currents through the veins. Her rest is broken; the sweet refreshment of sleep is disturbed by melancholy dreams; dry sorrows drinks her blood, until her enfeebled frame sinks under the slightest external in jury. Look for her, after a little while, and you find friendship weeping over her untimely grave, and wondering that one, who but lately glowed with all the radience of health and beauty, should so speedily be
